

GRACIAS A DIOS

Divinely Handmade Mezcal & Gin

CERTIFICATIONS

Gracias a Dios does not pursue official certifications because artisanal mezcal production is and always has been organic — no pesticides, no herbicides — just agave, sun, and water.

COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Employee salaries are 25% above industry standard practices.

The company assists employees with college tuition and continuing education.

All products are bottled and labeled by hand by a local all-women cooperative called “Shiin Dobb Co-Op.”

SUSTAINABILITY MEASURES

The palenque is 100% solar powered. Each month, the system produces around 1.41MWh, which equals 2,150lbs of carbon emissions offset.

All bottles are made from 100% recycled glass and use eco corks.

The team recycles discarded agave to produce adobe bricks for their buildings.

Rain water accounts for 60% of water usage — around 24,000 liters per year.

Every year, they let 20% of the agaves go to flower to collect seeds and replant. They also plant native vegetable crops between agave rows.

Grow their own oak and mesquite trees to fuel roasting pits — and for every tree harvested, they plant five more. They’ve planted ~5,000 mesquite trees per year.
